

Finding a Nursing Home in New York State

A Consumer Directory from the New York State Department of Health

Nursing homes are places to live where care is available for people who need 24-hour nursing care and supervision outside of a hospital. Although all nursing homes must provide certain basic services, some homes provide special care for certain types of clients. For example, some homes provide services for the head injured, some for those who are ventilator-dependent, some for people with AIDS and some specialize in the care of children.

After you have explored alternatives and you, your family and involved professional health care providers agree that a nursing home is required, carefully select a nursing care facility.

Information contained in this directory will aid you in selecting the right nursing home. It is written for you, the prospective resident. If someone else must organize the search and make the decisions, it is important that you be as involved as possible in the process.

The directory is divided into three sections:

- Section I explains the things you should know when you choose a nursing home.
- Section II provides information on what to look for when you visit a nursing home.
- Section III provides information on the nursing homes in your region, including location, size, type of ownership and whether or not the nursing home is certified by the New York State Department of Health to provide special services.

Finding a Nursing Home

Planning in Advance

Finding the nursing home that will best meet your needs can be a difficult and time-consuming task. The more information you have, the easier this task will be and the more likely that you will find the home that is right for you. Making the decision that a nursing home is the right place for you and looking around at different homes is important to do before you are hospitalized for a medical crisis.

Nursing homes generally operate at close to full capacity and a particular nursing home may not always have an available opening. It is best to have several nursing homes in mind should the need arise. With the help of your doctor and the hospital discharge planning staff, realistically assess your medical, nursing and social needs and seek facilities that can best meet these needs. For example, a facility with a strong physical therapy department might be important if you are recovering from a stroke.

Discuss nursing home placement with your family so that the eventuality of this possibility will be fully explored and your feelings known before a crisis occurs.

Watch for articles in newspapers and magazines and for television programs that deal with nursing homes. Pick up information on nursing homes from social service agencies or local offices for the aging and local health departments. Contact community groups and advocacy groups. Page 12 lists a number of state and voluntary agencies that may be able to help.

Ask family and friends about their own experiences. If you know someone who is in a nursing home, visit that person and ask questions. Ask questions of key personnel at the facilities you visit: the administrator, social work director, nursing director, medical director, for example. Make your own judgments. A caring home should welcome both your desire to visit and the questions you ask.

Medical need and method of payment play a large part in admission.

A medical assessment must be performed before you can be admitted to a nursing home. This assessment is done by a registered nurse who has been certified to perform the assessment. The assessment is a two-step process and is specifically designed by the State Health Department to evaluate your functional status as well as your appropriateness for a nursing home. The state requires that assessment forms be completed for everyone who applies for residence in a nursing home in New York State. The forms are valid for 30 days for hospitalized individuals and 90 days for those at home.

The nursing home administrator, admissions director or director of social services will be able to explain arrangements for your admission to the facility. If you are receiving care in a hospital, your doctor and the hospital social worker/discharge planner will assist in making arrangements for your placement, hopefully in the nursing home of your choice.

Although most people find that the need to enter a nursing home comes about after a serious illness treated in a hospital, you will be better off if you plan in advance. If you are applying for admission to a nursing home from a hospital, speak with the hospital's discharge planner. Nursing homes typically do not have many vacancies, so it is advisable to have several suitable facilities in mind. Regulations require formal application before you can be placed on a waiting list. Once you've made your choices, ask to be placed on the waiting list. Continue to check the status of your application by calling in regularly to the specific offices where you submitted your applications.

New York State regulations require that a hospitalized patient on Medicaid who no longer needs inpatient hospital care be placed in the first available bed within 50 miles of the patient's home. By telling the hospital which nursing homes to apply to, you or your family can influence the location of the eventual placement.

Admission

Medical Need

Waiting Lists

Admissions Agreement

The admissions agreement (also called the financial agreement, admission contract, entrance contract or some other term) is a legal agreement between the nursing home and the resident to spell out conditions for admission. The contract should state the costs, services included and all legal responsibilities of the resident. Ideally, it should also include care (in accordance with intensity of need), emergency procedures and standards of food service (for example, availability of therapeutic diets, kosher diets, etc.).

Ask questions about the contract. Ask your attorney, the nursing home administrator or admissions director to explain anything that is not clear. Call an advocacy group with questions. See page 14.

Paying for Nursing Home Care

Since the cost of nursing home care in New York State is so high (ranging from $3,000 to $10,000 a month), few people can afford to pay out of their own pocket for very long. Ninety percent of New York State nursing home residents are or become reliant upon state and federal subsidies.

If you have the means and plan to pay with your own funds, you will have a much better chance of getting admitted to the nursing home of your choice.

Meet with an elder law attorney to get advice on estate planning, Medicaid, Medicare and long term care insurance before you apply to a nursing home. The New York State Bar Association Referral Service as well as many local bar associations will provide you with a list of elder law attorneys. Call 800-342-3661 for information.

Private Payment

Nursing homes charge a basic daily rate for the services they provide and these vary from home to home. Some homes have all-inclusive rates, others have a rate for room and board and add additional charges for physician's services, laboratory tests, physical therapy, prescription drugs, etc.

Private pay rates are not regulated. Homes may charge their private pay residents whatever they wish. These rates can be expected to go up at least once a year. If you are planning to pay for nursing home care out of your own pocket, ask for a list of services that are covered by the basic daily rate. Also ask how the rates are adjusted and how residents are notified of adjustments. (Under current regulation, this notification must occur in writing 30 days prior to any upward adjustment in the daily rate for a service being implemented.)

The basic daily rate must cover room and meals, housekeeping, linen, general nursing care, medical records and services, recreation and personal care. There may be extra charges for items that vary from resident to resident, such as physical therapy and medications. Discuss with the home's admissions director, administrator or social worker what services are standard and what additional services might be required and what they cost.

Homes are permitted to ask for a prepayment or a security deposit. The home can ask for no more than three months' prepayment. Prepayment used as security must be deposited by the home in an interest-bearing account.

If you leave the home or die, any amount paid to the home over the cost of services already provided must be refunded.

It is illegal for a nursing home to demand or accept donations (to a building fund, for example) from family members to assure placement of a relative.

Most homes require full financial disclosure from residents who will be paying privately. Since many nursing home residents who enter as private pay residents eventually use up their funds and go on Medicaid, the homes want to know how long the resident will be able to pay privately and when to apply for Medicaid. Once you are eligible for Medicaid, you have the right to have Medicaid pay for your care (if the home accepts Medicaid). When this happens, the nursing home should assist in completing the necessary forms.

In New York State, you may not be moved out of a nursing home because you have exhausted your personal resources. Also, your spouse need not spend all his/her personal resources on your care if you are institutionalized.

Some homes suggest that funds be placed in a trust that the home controls, or that the resident's Social Security checks be made payable directly to the home. The law guarantees residents the right to control their own financial affairs as long as they are willing and able to do so, or to assign that responsibility to a friend or family member. The nursing home may be given control over a resident's finances if no one else is willing to handle them.

Private Insurance

Private long term care insurance policies are becoming more and more available. They are advertised as a possible alternative to Medicaid or as a way to avoid exhausting resources when nursing home care is needed. They vary in the coverage they provide and should be carefully examined before purchasing. In New York State, only a few policies are valid. The State Insurance Department publishes materials comparing long term care policies offered by different companies. Call 800-342-3736 for more information.

The federal government is now permitting New York State to authorize Medicaid without someone exhausting his/her assets if that person first purchases a long term care insurance policy sponsored by the state. Such a policy must cover at least three years of long term care, six years of home care or an equivalent combination of both. Once an individual purchases such a policy and once the benefits for such a policy are exhausted, that person, if income eligible, will be eligible for Medicaid payment for long term care for the remainder of his/her life without consideration of his/her assets. Most importantly, however, whatever assets that person has will be protected and will not have to be used to meet long term care costs. You may hear this type of insurance referred to as a "partnership" long term care policy.

Medicaid, established by Congress in 1965, is a government health insurance program for people of all ages whose income is too low to provide for routine health care costs, or whose health care costs are too high to be covered by their income. This health insurance covers the cost of nursing care for as long as the care is required, if a resident is eligible.

A comprehensive application process is used to determine eligibility for the Medicaid program. This process requires that applicants provide detailed information and documentation regarding income and assets.

A Medicaid applicant must be a citizen or permanent resident in the United States, must meet New York State income and resource limitations and must show medical need.

Currently, a Medicaid recipient in a nursing home is allowed to retain $50 of monthly income as a personal needs allowance to meet personal expenses that are not covered by Medicaid. Call your local Department of Social Services office for additional information on Medicaid.

Medicare is a federal health insurance program for disabled people and people over age 65. Skilled nursing services must be needed on a daily basis to be eligible for Medicare. Medicare will pay a maximum of 100 days of care in an approved nursing facility for patients in need of skilled care following a hospitalization of at least three full days. To qualify, the patient must be admitted to the nursing home within 30 days of discharge from the hospital.

Many people leave a hospital and enter a nursing home expecting Medicare to continue to pay for health services. This is generally not the case. Medicare will not pay for a nursing home stay if it is determined that only custodial care is required, or if skilled nursing home care and/or rehabilitative services are needed only on a periodic basis. Under Medicare rules, the need for skilled nursing care must be daily. The program has a number of specifics about what services are included and requires that you be responsible for a co-payment. For further information, contact your local Social Security office or call 800-772-1213 for a copy of the Medicare Handbook.

Visiting the Facility

Call the nursing homes you are interested in and make an appointment to meet with the admissions staff (usually a social worker).

Each nursing home has its own policies and procedures, but all must follow certain state and federal regulations and respect residents' rights. A copy of the home's policies should be available upon request. Following is a list of some policies to check:

- complaint procedures;
- the use of personal belongings and furniture;
- the availability of ethnic foods or special diet preferences;
- room assignments and changes;
- reserving a bed if transferred to a hospital;
- visiting hours (should cover a 10-hour period and two meal times);
- emergency procedures;
- self-care;
- phone calls;
- leaving the facility for short visits with family or friends;
- procedures for handling theft;
- access to personal funds.

Section II of this directory provides more detailed information on what you should look for when you visit a nursing home.

Nursing Home Administration

Nursing homes may be owned by state/local governments (public nursing homes), individuals, corporations and religious or charitable organizations. Most nursing homes are not-for-profit businesses (voluntary nursing homes) or businesses operated for profit (proprietary nursing homes). An individual or a nonprofit organization may own or operate more than one nursing home.

Final responsibility for the operation of a nursing home lies with its governing body (voluntary nursing home) or owner (proprietary nursing home). The governing body (the board of directors or trustees) is legally responsible for the home. The governing body meets to set policies and to adopt and enforce rules and regulations for the health care and safety of the residents. The type of ownership and management are not necessarily an indication of the quality of service that you would receive.

The person in charge of the day-to-day management of a nursing home is called the administrator; the administrator is appointed by the governing body or owner. Other key personnel include the director of nursing services, the medical director, the director of social services and the director of admissions.

The administrator of the nursing home must be licensed by New York State, the director of nursing services must be a registered nurse and licensed by New York State and the medical director must be a licensed New York State physician.

When you visit a nursing home, look for its license. It will be prominently displayed, usually in the lobby.

Standards governing the operation of a nursing home are set by state regulation (Part 415 of 10NYCRR) and federal regulation (Part 483 of 42CFR). These standards intend to assure the highest possible quality of care and most meaningful quality of life for all residents in nursing homes. Standards cover a range of requirements including but not limited to residents' rights, clinical services (including nursing, dietary, medical and rehabilitation services, for example), and administrative (including quality assurance and the physical environment, for example). Optional services are also covered by law (rehabilitation services for residents with head injuries, long term care services for people with AIDS and for ventilator-dependent residents) and adult day health care services.

Look for the latest state survey (inspection) report of how the home met the state and federal standards.

In New York State, the Department of Health, acting as the agent for the U.S. Health Care Financing

Evaluating A Nursing Home

Administration, has the responsibility to monitor quality of care in nursing homes. State surveyors inspect each New York State nursing home every nine to 15 months. Surveyors interview residents, review residents' records, inspect the premises and assess compliance with state and federal standards (see Appendix A). Surveyors may issue statements of deficiencies any time they visit a nursing home. If the need arises, state or federal survey staff may visit nursing homes more often to respond to complaints by residents or families or to monitor the progress as nursing homes correct deficiencies.

Based on the results of the inspection and the seriousness of problems noted, the Department of Health decides whether to take enforcement action. Repeat problems can result in fines and, in extreme cases, closure.

Remember, deficiencies are not necessarily the only indication of the quality of the care and administration of the home. Ask to look at the results of a few surveys so you can see if there is a pattern of deficiencies in certain areas.

Complete results of the most recent survey must be available in the facility in a place readily accessible to residents and visitors without staff assistance. Ask questions about deficiencies, if any, and how they were corrected. If you have additional questions after leaving the home, call back with follow-up questions. Or, contact the local office of the New York State Department of Health (see page 21) or the New York State Office for the Aging Long Term Care Ombudsman at 800-342-9871.

Health Care Decisions

Illness and the possibility of death are subjects few people find easy to discuss. Yet, these issues deserve consideration by both you and your family because they often involve decisions that may have to be made if life-sustaining procedures become necessary. This kind of decision does not have to be left to the family to decide. Decide in advance with the help of your family. Any course of treatment for you will be much easier to determine if your wishes are known in advance (see Appendix E).

Under the New York State Health Care Proxy Law, adults may appoint someone they trust to decide about medical treatment should they become unable to decide on their own. See Appendix C for a copy of the Health Care Proxy form and information about the Health Care Proxy Law. This form can be duplicated and does not have to be executed by an attorney. Additional copies are available from the nursing home administrator or from the New York State Department of Health. Most attorneys in New York State also have these forms.

Adults can also give specific instructions about treatment in advance. Those instructions can be verbal or written, and are referred to as Advance Directives.

The right to decide about treatment also includes the right to decide about cardiopulmonary resuscitation (an emergency treatment to restart the heart and lungs when breathing or circulation stops). You and your doctors should decide in advance whether or not you want resuscitation measures taken. If you wish, the doctor will give the medical staff a “do-not-resuscitate” (DNR) order. An explanation of DNR including your rights under New York State law is included as Appendix D.

Some nursing homes' moral or religious philosophy may conflict with your wishes about advance directives. Ask about the home's policy regarding advance directives.

Policies covering the rights of residents are established by state and federal regulations. The nursing home must implement and explain these policies to its residents and must post a summary of residents' rights (a residents' bill of rights) in the building for easy reading. Be sure to notice it and ask any questions you have about its provisions.

Every resident in a nursing home should receive appropriate care, be treated with courtesy and enjoy continued civil and legal rights.

Residents' Rights

Long Term Care Ombudsman Program

In New York State, nursing home residents have the right to:

- dignity, respect and a comfortable living environment;
- quality of care and treatment without discrimination;
- freedom of choice to make independent decisions;
- safeguard of money and property;
- safeguards in admission, transfer and discharge;
- privacy in communications;
- participate in organizations and activities of their choice;
- an easy-to-use and responsive complaint procedure;
- exercise all rights without fear of reprisals.

For a more thorough explanation of nursing home residents' rights, ask the nursing home administrator for policies on residents' rights and for the booklet "Your Rights as a Nursing Home Resident in New York State," or write for a copy to:

Publications
New York State Department of Health
Box 2000
Albany, NY 12220

The Long Term Care Ombudsman Program in the State Office for the Aging can help you throughout the nursing home placement process. It provides another source of information about how to go about choosing a facility, understanding the rights of residents and learning about good standards of care. However, the program does not rate or recommend specific facilities and will not choose a facility for a family or a prospective resident.

The State Ombudsman also investigates and resolves complaints made by, or on behalf of, nursing home residents, and monitors the development and implementation of laws, regulations and policies that affect nursing homes. For further information, contact:

Or, contact the following advocacy organizations. They may be able to help you if your questions or concerns about a nursing home cannot be resolved by speaking with nursing home staff and administrators.

Coalition of Institutionalized Aged & Disabled
(CIAD)
c/o Hunter-Brookdale Center on Aging
425 E. 25th St., Room 818
New York, New York 10010
212-481-4348

CIAD was founded in 1973 to protect the rights of nursing home residents and provide them with the information and skills they need to advocate for themselves. The coalition educates residents about their rights, provides technical assistance to resident councils to make them more effective and promotes residents' participation in public issues. Its board consists of nursing home and adult home residents.

Friends and Relatives of Institutionalized Aged, Inc.
(FRIA)
11 John St., Suite 601
New York, New York 10038
212-732-4455

Further Information and Assistance

FRIA is an independent nonprofit advocacy group organized in 1976 to speak on behalf of the families and friends of adult home and nursing home residents in the New York City area. Through a telephone hotline, FRIA helps families in the selection of a facility and in understanding financial arrangements and admission contracts. It supports families and family councils seeking to safeguard resident rights, responds to problems of care and advances the independence of all residents.

Medicare Rights Center
1460 Broadway, 8th Floor
New York, New York 10036-7393
212-869-3850

The center is exclusively devoted to promoting and protecting Medicare beneficiaries' rights through education, advocacy and representation. The center assists Medicare recipients to recover funds by teaching them how to assert their Medicare rights, and assists recipients with appealing their Medicare determinations, distributing self-help literature and enforcing federal and state physician charge limits for Medicare beneficiaries.

National Citizens' Coalition for Nursing Home Reform
1424 16th Street, N.W., Suite 202
Washington, D.C. 20036-2211
202-332-2275

The coalition provides information (through a clearinghouse and a bi-monthly newsletter) and leadership on federal and state regulatory and legislative policy development, and models and strategies to improve nursing home care and life for residents. Established in 1975, the coalition promotes community involvement in nursing homes; assists in resolving individual complaints and problems; collaborates with health care workers to improve care in nursing homes; monitors regulatory activities to generate effective government enforcement of standards; and supports resident and family council and other forms of consumer empowerment.

New York StateWide Senior Action Council, Inc.
275 State St.
Albany, New York 12210
518-436-1006
Patient's Rights Hotline 800-333-4374
(in New York City, 212-316-9393)

Formed in 1972, StateWide is a grassroots nonprofit advocacy organization for senior citizens. The Albany office maintains regular contact with state agencies and legislative leaders on important issues for seniors and has been instrumental in establishing a prescription drug assistance program in the state known as EPIC, maintaining quality care in the Medicare program and establishing the patients' bill of rights. The StateWide hotline is for anyone who has a problem with hospital admissions or discharges, unwanted transfers between hospitals, an unsafe transfer to another hospital, poor quality care, poor discharge planning or lack of posthospital services.

Nursing Home Community Coalition of New York State (NHCC)
11 John St., Suite 601
New York, New York 10038
212-385-0355

NHCC provides leadership for its 33-member statewide consumer advocacy organizations. The coalition works to upgrade state regulations, and the state's surveillance and enforcement of existing regulations for the state's 100,000 frail nursing home residents. The group also educates consumers on key nursing home problems and issues.

SECTION II

When You Visit A Nursing Home

Physical Appearance

Take a good look around at everything.

- [] Do residents have personal belongings decorating their rooms?
- [] Does each resident have at least one comfortable chair?
- [] Does each resident have his/her own dresser and closet space with a locked drawer or other secured compartment?
- [] Is there an out-of-doors area where residents can walk or sit and is it used?
- [] Does the equipment—wheelchairs, therapy devices—appear in good condition?
- [] Is there a lounge or other area where residents can entertain visitors privately?

Safety

State standards require that a home provide a safe environment for residents whether they are mobile or in wheelchairs, whether they are confused or have poor eyesight.

Look for:

- [] handrails in hallways and other critical places;
- [] wide, clear walking areas;
- [] the absence of hazards that might cause accidents;
- [] good lighting;
- [] telephones and large print notices placed so that wheelchair-bound residents can make use of them;
- [] appropriate inside temperature and whether or not residents are dressed appropriately;
- [] clearly marked exits and well-lighted elevators.

Find out if the local fire department participates in fire drills and how often drills are held in the home.

Cleanliness

A good home should be clean. Look in the corners of residents' rooms, bathrooms, kitchens, nurses' stations, etc., as well as in the main visiting lounges. Look for cleanliness EVERYWHERE.

Unpleasant odors reflect problems. If there is an odor in a particular section of the home, go back to see if it has been eliminated within a reasonable amount of time. This will give you an idea of how long it takes the home to deal with the cause of the unpleasant odor.

The average nursing home resident is old, sick and frail. A good home is aware that even frail elderly people can have good days and bad days and can be encouraged to be more active when they are feeling better and comforted when they are feeling poorly.

You may be able to judge how successful a home is in caring for residents by observing them without infringing on their privacy.

- Do residents socialize with each other?
- Is there activity in the corridors?
- Are residents engaged in doing things or just sitting in a lounge or in the hallways?
- Are residents neatly dressed and do they appear to be wearing their own clothing?
- Are residents out of bed?
- Do staff interact with residents in a warm and friendly manner?
- Do staff address the residents by name?
- Do staff respond to someone calling for help?
- Are people assisted in walking for the purpose of exercising or retraining?

Ask several residents how they keep occupied and what they particularly like doing at the facility.

- Do residents share rooms? How many people to a room?
- Does the facility try to select compatible roommates?
- Are rooms assigned based on severity of illness?
- How does the facility deal with problems between roommates?

Residents

Room Assignments

Food Mealtime is an important part of the residents' day. Try to visit during meal time and observe the way food is served and how the staff and residents interact.

- Is food appetizing and of good quality?
- Do residents have an alternative to the main menu?
- Are residents encouraged and assisted with eating (if necessary) while the food is served?
- Is this a time when socializing is encouraged?
- Is the dining room clean, attractive and colorful?

Many facilities try to be less "institutional" and use tablecloths, china and silver, enhancing mealtime.

Medical/Nursing Care

It is hard to observe medical/nursing practices, but you can ask questions:

- Does the same nurse or aide care for the resident during each shift?
- Will your family doctor be able to care for you in the facility?
- If you do not have a private doctor, who will the physician be and what relationship will you or a family member have with this doctor?
- How often will visits be made, and how will medical emergencies be handled?

If you need more than routine medical care, ask if a specialist can be called in and how this is done. Find out with which hospital(s) the nursing home may be affiliated.

Special Therapies

If you might need speech, physical or special therapy, look at the therapy rooms. If possible, speak to the staff person in charge.

- How frequently will therapy be offered?
- Can therapies be provided on an optional basis or a for-private-pay basis?
- Is the physician involved in assessing the therapy and your response to it?

All homes are required to offer activities for residents. As you visit homes, you may find a great difference in the way activities are offered. Ideally, a program should be designed to fit the interests and skills of each person and be available on a daily basis at various times of the day including weekends.

- [] Ask if residents are taken out for events in the community. How often? Where do they go?
- [] Do people in wheelchairs get to participate?
- [] How often are outside events brought in for the entertainment of residents?
- [] What activities are provided for bed-bound residents?

If you will be paying privately for care, ask about the fee schedule and be sure you find out what services and supplies ARE NOT INCLUDED and what these items will cost.

To determine how often fees increase, ask how often fees increased in the past and what the increases were.

State law prohibits residents from being asked to pay more than three months in advance upon admission. (People admitted under Medicare do not have to pay anything in advance.)

The last state inspection report (survey) should be available to you in a place within the facility that is readily accessible. It will tell you if the facility failed to meet any areas of the state's health code. Look for this report. If there are any deficiencies noted, specifically ask what steps have been taken to correct these violations.

Nursing Home Information

The following pages list each certified nursing home in New York State. Information comes from the New York State Department of Health records (updated as of December 1996). Each page lists by county the name, address and telephone number of the facility, type of ownership and number of beds. Also noted is whether or not the nursing home is certified by the New York State Department of Health to provide services for residents with special needs (for example, children, AIDS patients, individuals who are ventilator dependent). Unless otherwise noted, all nursing homes listed accept Medicaid and Medicare residents.

If you have any questions, contact the nursing home you are interested in, call the New York State Office for the Aging Long Term Care Ombudsman at 800-342-9871 or contact the New York State Department of Health office nearest you. These are listed below:

Glossary

Advance Directives

A verbal or written instruction plan in advance of incapacitating illness or injury, which ensures that the resident's wishes about treatment will be followed. This includes but is not limited to a health care proxy, a do-not-resuscitate (DNR) order recorded in the resident's medical record and a living will.

Basic Services

Those services included in the daily rate. At the time of admission, a written copy of the following basic services must be made available to all residents:

- the daily, weekly or monthly rate;
- board, including therapeutic or modified diets, as prescribed by a doctor;
- lodging—a clean, healthful, sheltered environment, properly outfitted;
- 24-hour-per-day nursing care;
- the use of all equipment, medical supplies and modalities used in the care of nursing home residents, including but not limited to catheters, hypodermic syringes and needles, irrigation outfits, dressings and pads, etc.;
- fresh bed linen, as required, changed at least twice weekly, including sufficient quantities of necessary bed linen or appropriate substitutes changed as often as required for incontinent residents;
- hospital gowns or pajamas as required by the clinical condition of the resident, unless the resident, family member or designated representative elects to furnish them, and laundry services for these and other launderable personal clothing items;
- general household medicine cabinet supplies, including but not limited to nonprescription medications, materials for routine skin care, dental hygiene, care of hair, etc., except when specific items are medically indicated and prescribed for exceptional use for a specific resident;
- assistance and/or supervision, when required, with activities of daily living, including but not limited to toileting, bathing, feeding and assistance with getting from place to place;
- services, in the daily performance of their assigned duties, by members of the nursing home staff assigned to resident care;
- use of customarily stocked equipment, including but not limited to crutches, walkers, wheelchairs or other supportive equipment, including training in their use when necessary, unless such items are prescribed by a doctor for regular and sole use by a specific resident;
- activities program, including but not limited to a planned schedule of recreational, motivational, social and other activities together with the necessary materials and supplies to make the resident's life more meaningful;
- social services as needed;

- physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech pathology services, audiology services and dental services, on either a staff or fee-for-services basis, as prescribed by a doctor, administered by or under the direct supervision of a licensed and currently registered physical therapist, occupational therapist, speech pathologist, qualified audiologist or registered dentist.

Designated Representative

The individual or individuals designated to receive information and to assist and/or act on behalf of a particular resident to the extent permitted by New York State law. The representation occurs by a court of law if sought; by the resident if he or she has the capacity to make such a designation; or by family members and others who have an interest in the well-being of the resident. The name of the designated representative must be noted in the resident's clinical record at the facility.

The designated representative: (1) receives any written and verbal information required to be provided to the resident if the resident lacks the capacity to understand or make use of the information, and receives any information required to be provided to both the resident and the designated representative; (2) participates (to the extent authorized by New York State law) in decisions and choices regarding the care, treatment and well-being of the resident if such resident lacks the capacity to make decisions and choices. These decisions are not the same as those made by a health care agent unless the same person has been appointed both the designated representative and the health care agent.

Governing Body

The policymaking body of the facility, the board of directors or trustees of the facility or the owner or owners of the facility.

Health Care Agent

Someone appointed by the resident to decide about treatment if the resident becomes incapable of making decisions for himself or herself. The resident has the right to appoint someone by filling out a form called a Health Care Proxy. These forms should be available at the facility, should be kept at the facility and made known to the medical staff.

Health Care Proxy

A document that delegates the authority to another individual known as a Health Care Agent to make health care decisions on behalf of the resident when that resident is incapacitated.

Nursing Home

A facility (subject to Article 28 of the New York State Public Health Law) providing lodging for 24 or more consecutive hours to three or more nursing home residents who are not related to the facility operator by marriage or by blood, who need regular nursing services or other professional services, but who do not need the services of a general hospital.

Resident

An individual who has been admitted to and who resides in a long term care facility (nursing home) and is entitled to receive care, treatment and services required by New York State law.

Appendix A

Nursing Home Inspections

The U. S. Department of Health and Human Services has developed a national process for nursing home inspections to ensure quality care. In New York State this is carried out by the Department of Health. The state's survey team most often includes a nurse, dietitian, sanitarian and social worker, but other health professionals such as physicians, physical therapists and pharmacists may also participate. Surveyors spend most of their time evaluating the care and services residents receive. Surveyors observe meals, drug administration and recreational activities and also speak with residents and their families regarding the treatment they receive and their opinions about the nursing home.

The inspection survey includes the following steps:

- touring the nursing home;
- meeting with staff and administrators;
- meeting with members of the resident council and/or other residents;
- assessing the safety of the building;
- observing meals to assure that residents' nutritional needs are being met;
- interviewing nursing home residents, examining residents' medical records and observing clinical procedures; and
- summarizing the results of the survey and reporting findings to the nursing home administrator.

Every nursing home receives a copy of the Department of Health's most recent survey report and federal law guarantees the report be made available for inspection by the public.

Appointing Your Health Care Agent New York State's Proxy Law

A law called the New York Health Care Proxy Law allows you to appoint someone you trust — for example, a family member or close friend — to decide about treatment if you lose the ability to decide for yourself. You can do this by using a Health Care Proxy form like the one inside, to appoint your “health care agent.”

This law gives you the power to make sure that health care professionals follow your wishes. Your agent can also decide how your wishes apply as your medical condition changes. Hospitals, doctors and other health care providers must follow your agent's decisions as if they were your own.

You can give the person you select, your health care agent, as little or as much authority as you want. You can allow your agent to decide about all health care or only certain treatments. You may also give your agent instructions that he or she has to follow.

Why should I choose a health care agent?

If you become too sick to make health care decisions, someone else must decide for you. Health care professionals often look to family members for guidance. But family members are not allowed to decide to stop treatment, even when they believe that is what you would choose or what is best for you under the circumstances. Appointing an agent lets you control your medical treatment by:

- allowing your agent to stop treatment when he or she decides that is what you would want or what is best for you under the circumstances;
- choosing one family member to decide about treatment because you think that person would make the best decisions or because you want to avoid conflict or confusion about who should decide; and
- choosing someone outside your family to decide about treatment because no one in your family is available or because you prefer that someone other than a family member decide about your health care.

How can I appoint a health care agent?

All competent adults can appoint a health care agent by signing a form called a Health Care Proxy. You don't need a lawyer, just two adult witnesses. You can use the form printed here, but you don't have to.

When would my health care agent begin to make treatment decisions for me?

Your health care agent would begin to make treatment decisions after doctors decide that you are not able to make health care decisions. As long as you are able to make treatment decisions for yourself, you will have the right to do so.

What decisions can my health care agent make?

Unless you limit your health care agent's authority, your agent will be able to make any treatment decision that you could have made if you were able to decide for yourself. Your agent can agree that you should receive treatment, choose among different treatments and decide that treatments should not be provided, in accord with your wishes and interests. If your health care agent is not aware of your wishes about artificial nutrition and hydration (nourishment and water provided by feeding tubes), he or she will not be able to make decisions about these measures. Artificial nutrition and hydration are used in many circumstances, and are often used to continue the life of patients who are in a permanent coma.

How will my health care agent make decisions?

You can write instructions on the proxy form. Your agent must follow your oral and written instructions, as well as your moral and religious beliefs. If your agent does not know your wishes or beliefs, your agent is legally required to act in your best interests.

Who will pay attention to my agent?

All hospitals, doctors and other health care facilities are legally required to honor the decisions by your agent. If a hospital objects to some treatment options (such as removing certain treatment) they must tell you or your agent IN ADVANCE.

What if my health care agent is not available when decisions must be made?

You can appoint an alternate agent to decide for you if your health care agent is not available or able to act when decisions must be made. Otherwise, health care providers will make treatment decisions for you that follow instructions you gave while you were still able to do so. Any instructions that you write on your Health Care Proxy form will guide health care providers under these circumstances.

What if I change my mind?

It is easy to cancel the proxy, to change the person you have chosen as your health care agent or to change any treatment instructions you have written on your Health Care Proxy form. Just fill out a new form. In addition, you can require that the Health Care Proxy expire on a specified date or if certain events occur. Otherwise, the Health Care Proxy will be valid indefinitely. If you choose your spouse as your health care agent and you get divorced or legally separated, the appointment is automatically cancelled.

Can my health care agent be legally liable for decisions made on my behalf?

No. Your health care agent will not be liable for treatment decisions made in good faith on your behalf. Also, he or she cannot be held liable for costs of your care, just because he or she is your agent.

Is a health care proxy the same as a living will?

No. A living will is a document that provides specific instructions about health care treatment. It is generally used to declare wishes to refuse life-sustaining treatment under certain circumstances.

In contrast, the health care proxy allows you to choose someone you trust to make treatment decisions on your behalf. Unlike a living will, a health care proxy does not require that you know in advance all the decisions that may arise. Instead, your health care agent can interpret your wishes as medical circumstances change and can make decisions you could not have known would have to be made. The health care proxy is just as useful for decisions to receive treatment as it is for decisions to stop treatment. If you complete a Health Care Proxy form, but also have a living will, the living will provides instructions for your health care agent, and will guide his or her decisions.

Where should I keep the proxy form after it is signed?

Give a copy to your agent, your doctor and any other family members or close friends you want. You can also keep a copy in your wallet or purse or with other important papers.

APPOINTING A HEALTH CARE AGENT IS A SERIOUS DECISION. MAKE SURE YOU TALK ABOUT IT WITH YOUR FAMILY, CLOSE FRIENDS AND YOUR DOCTOR. DO IT IN ADVANCE, NOT JUST WHEN YOU ARE PLANNING TO ENTER THE HOSPITAL. FILLING OUT A HEALTH CARE PROXY IS VOLUNTARY. NO ONE CAN REQUIRE YOU TO DO SO.

About the Health Care Proxy

This is an important legal form. Before signing this form, you should understand the following facts:

1. This form gives the person you choose as your agent the authority to make all health care decisions for you, except to the extent you say otherwise in this form. "Health care" means any treatment, service or procedure to diagnose or treat your physical or mental condition.
2. Unless you say otherwise, your agent will be allowed to make all health care decisions for you, including decisions to remove or provide life-sustaining treatment.
3. Unless your agent knows your wishes about artificial nutrition and hydration (nourishment and water provided by a feeding tube), he or she will not be allowed to refuse or consent to those measures for you.
4. Your agent will start making decisions for you when doctors decide that you are not able to make health care decisions for yourself.

You may write on this form any information about treatment that you do not desire and/or those treatments that you want to make sure you receive. Your agent must follow your instructions (oral and written) when making decisions for you.

If you want to give your agent written instructions, do so right on the form. For example, you could say:

If I become terminally ill, I do/don't want to receive the following treatments:....

If I am in a coma or unconscious, with no hope of recovery, then I do/don't want....

If I have brain damage or a brain disease that makes me unable to recognize people or speak and there is no hope that my condition will improve, I do/don't want...

I have discussed with my agent my wishes about _____ and I want my agent to make all decisions about these measures.

Examples of medical treatments about which you may wish to give your agent special instructions are listed below. This is not a complete list of the treatments about which you may leave instructions.

- artificial respiration
- artificial nutrition and hydration (nourishment and water provided by feeding tube)
- cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR)
- antipsychotic medication
- electric shock therapy
- antibiotics
- psychosurgery
- dialysis
- transplantation
- blood transfusions
- abortion
- sterilization

Talk about choosing an agent with your family and/or close friends. You should discuss this form with a doctor or another health care professional, such as a nurse or social worker, before you sign it to make sure that you understand the types of decisions that may be made for you. You may also wish to give your doctor a signed copy. You do not need a lawyer to fill out this form.

You can choose any adult (over 18), including a family member, or close friend, to be your agent. If you select a doctor as your agent, he or she may have to choose between acting as your agent or as your attending doctor; a physician cannot do both at the same time. Also, if you are a patient or resident of a hospital, nursing home or mental hygiene facility, there are special restrictions about naming someone who works for that facility as your agent. You should ask staff at the facility to explain those restrictions.

You should tell the person you choose that he or she will be your health care agent. You should discuss your health care wishes and this form with your agent. Be sure to give him or her a signed copy. Your agent cannot be sued for health care decisions made in good faith.

Even after you have signed this form, you have the right to make health care decisions for yourself as long as you are able to do so, and treatment cannot be given to you or stopped if you object. You can cancel the control given to your agent by telling him or her or your health care provider orally or in writing.

Filling Out the Proxy Form

Item (1) Write your name and the name, home address and telephone number of the person you are selecting as your agent.

Item (2) If you have special instructions for your agent, you should write them here. Also, if you wish to limit your agent's authority in any way, you should say so here. If you do not state any limitations, your agent will be allowed to make all health care decisions that you could have made, including the decision to consent to or refuse life-sustaining treatment. You may also state your wishes about organ or tissue donation(s).

Item (3) You may write the name, home address and telephone number of an alternate agent.

Item (4) This form will remain valid indefinitely unless you set an expiration date or condition for its expiration. This section is optional and should be filled in only if you want the health care proxy to expire.

Item (5) You must date and sign the proxy. If you are unable to sign yourself, you may direct someone else to sign in your presence. Be sure to include your address.

Two witnesses at least 18 years of age must sign your proxy. The person who is appointed agent or alternate agent cannot sign as a witness.

Health Care Proxy

(1) I, _____
hereby appoint _____
(name, home address and telephone number)

as my health care agent to make any and all health care decisions for me, except to the extent that I state otherwise. This proxy shall take effect when and if I become unable to make my own health care decisions.

(2) Optional instructions: I direct my agent to make health care decisions in accord with my wishes and limitations as stated below, or as he or she otherwise knows. (Attach additional pages if necessary.)

(Unless your agent knows your wishes about artificial nutrition and hydration [feeding tubes], your agent will not be allowed to make decisions about artificial nutrition and hydration. See instructions on reverse for samples of language you could use.)

(3) Name of substitute or fill-in agent if the person I appoint above is unable, unwilling or unavailable to act as my health care agent.

(name, home address and telephone number)

(4) Unless I revoke it, this proxy shall remain in effect indefinitely, or until the date or conditions stated below. This proxy shall expire (specific date or conditions, if desired):

(5) Signature _____
Address _____
Date _____

Statement by Witnesses (must be 18 or older)

I declare that the person who signed this document is personally known to me and appears to be of sound mind and acting of his or her own free will. He or she signed (or asked another to sign for him or her) this document in my presence.

Deciding about CPR: Do-Not-Resuscitate (DNR) Orders A Guide for Patients and Families

What do CPR and DNR orders mean?

CPR — cardiopulmonary resuscitation — refers to the medical procedures used to restart a patient’s heart and breathing when the patient suffers heart failure. CPR may involve simple efforts such as mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and external chest compression. Advanced CPR may involve electric shock, insertion of a tube to open the patient’s airway, injection of medication into the heart and in extreme cases, open chest heart massage.

A do-not-resuscitate (DNR) order tells medical professionals not to perform CPR. This means that doctors, nurses and emergency medical personnel will not attempt emergency CPR if the patient’s breathing or heartbeat stops.

DNR orders may be written for patients in a hospital or nursing home, or for patients at home. Hospital DNR orders tell the medical staff not to revive the patient if cardiac arrest occurs. If the patient is in a nursing home or at home, a DNR order tells the staff and emergency medical personnel not to perform emergency resuscitation and not to transfer the patient to a hospital for CPR.

Why are DNR orders issued?

CPR, when successful, restores heartbeat and breathing and allows patients to resume their previous lifestyle. The success of CPR depends on the patient’s overall medical condition. Age alone does not determine whether CPR will be successful, although illnesses and frailties that go along with age often make CPR less successful.

When patients are seriously ill or terminally ill, CPR may not work or may only partially work, leaving the patient brain-damaged or in a worse medical state than before the heart stopped. In these cases, some patients prefer to be cared for without aggressive efforts at resuscitation upon their death.

Can I request a DNR order?

Yes. All adult patients can request a DNR order. If you are sick and unable to tell your doctor that you want a DNR order written, a family member or close friend can decide for you.

Is my right to request or receive other treatment affected by a DNR order?

No. A DNR order is only a decision about CPR and does not relate to any other treatment.

Are DNR orders ethically acceptable?

It is widely recognized by health care professionals, clergy, lawyers and others that DNR orders are medically and ethically appropriate under certain circumstances. For some patients, CPR offers more burdens than benefits, and may be against the patient’s wishes.

Is my consent required for a DNR order?

Your doctor must speak to you before entering a DNR order if you are able to decide, unless your doctor believes that discussing CPR with you would cause you severe harm. In an emergency, it is assumed that all patients would consent to CPR. However, if a doctor decides that CPR will not work, it is not provided.

How can I make my wishes about DNR known?

An adult patient may consent to a DNR order orally by informing a physician, or in writing, such as a living will, if two witnesses are present. In addition, the Health Care Proxy Law allows you to appoint someone you trust to make decisions about CPR and other treatments if you become unable to decide for yourself.

Before deciding about CPR, you should speak with your doctor about your overall health and the benefits and burdens CPR would provide for you. A full and early discussion between you and your doctor will assure that your wishes will be known.

If I request a DNR order, must my doctor honor my wishes?

If you don't want CPR and you request a DNR order, your doctor must follow your wishes or:

- transfer your care to another doctor who will follow your wishes; or
- begin a process to settle the dispute if you are in a hospital or nursing home.

If the dispute is not resolved within 72 hours, your doctor must enter the order or transfer you to the care of another doctor.

If I am not able to decide about CPR for myself, who will decide?

First, two doctors must determine that you are unable to decide about CPR. You will be told of this determination and have the right to object.

If you become unable to decide about CPR, and you did not tell your doctor or others about your wishes in advance, a DNR order can be written with the consent of someone chosen by you, by a family member or by a close friend. The person highest on the following list will decide about CPR for you:

- the person chosen by you to make health care decisions under New York's Health Care Proxy Law;
- a court appointed guardian (if there is one);
- your closest relative (spouse, child, parent, sibling);
- a close friend.

How can I select someone to decide for me?

The Health Care Proxy Law allows adults to select someone they trust to make all health care decisions for them when they are no longer able to do so themselves, including decisions about CPR. You can name someone by filling out a health care proxy form, which you can get from your physician or other health care professionals.

Under what circumstances can a family member or close friend decide that a DNR order should be written?

A family member or close friend can consent to a DNR order only when you are unable to decide for yourself and you have not appointed someone to decide for you. Your family member or friend can consent to a DNR order when:

- you are terminally ill; or
- you are permanently unconscious; or
- CPR will not work (would be medically futile); or
- CPR would impose an extraordinary burden on you given your medical condition and the expected outcome of CPR.

Anyone deciding for you must base the decision on your wishes, including your religious and moral beliefs, or if your wishes are not known, on your best interests.

What if members of my family disagree?

In a hospital or nursing home, your family can ask that the disagreement be mediated. Your doctor can request mediation if he or she is aware of any disagreement among your family members.

What if I lose the ability to make decisions about CPR and do not have anyone who can decide for me?

A DNR order can be written if two doctors decide that CPR would not work or if a court approves of the DNR order. It would be best if you discussed your wishes about CPR with your doctor in advance.

Who can consent to a DNR order for children?

A DNR order can be entered for a child with the consent of the child's parent or guardian. If the child is old enough to understand and decide about CPR, the child's consent is also required for a DNR order.

What happens if I change my mind after a DNR order has been written?

You or anyone who consents to a DNR order for you can remove the order by telling your doctor, nurses or others of the decision.

What happens to a DNR order if I am transferred from a nursing home to a hospital or vice versa?

The DNR order will continue until a doctor examines you and decides whether the order should remain or be canceled. If the doctor decides to cancel the DNR order, you or anyone who decided for you will be told and can ask that the DNR order be entered again.

If I am at home with a DNR order, what happens if a family member or friend panics and calls an ambulance to resuscitate me?

If you have a DNR order and family members show it to emergency personnel, they will not try to resuscitate you or take you to a hospital emergency room for CPR.

What happens to my DNR order if I am transferred from a hospital or nursing home to home care?

The order issued for you in a hospital or nursing home will not apply at home. You, your health care agent or family member must specifically consent to a home DNR order. If you leave a hospital or nursing home without a home DNR order, a DNR order can be issued by a doctor for you at home.

Planning In Advance For Your Medical Treatment

Your Right to Decide About Treatment

Adults in New York State have the right to accept or refuse medical treatment, including life-sustaining treatment. Our Constitution and state laws protect this right. This means that you have the right to request or consent to treatment, to refuse treatment before it has started and to have treatment stopped once it has begun.

Planning In Advance

Sometimes because of illness or injury people are unable to talk to a doctor and decide about treatment for themselves. You may wish to plan in advance to make sure that your wishes about treatment will be followed if you become unable to decide for yourself for a short or long time period. If you don't plan ahead, family members or other people close to you may not be allowed to make decisions for you and follow your wishes.

In New York State, appointing someone you can trust to decide about treatment if you become unable to decide for yourself is the best way to protect your treatment wishes and concerns. You have the right to appoint someone by filling out a form called a Health Care Proxy. A copy of the form and information about the Health Care Proxy are available from your health care provider.

If you have no one you can appoint to decide for you, or do not want to appoint someone, you can also give specific instructions about treatment in advance. Those instructions can be written, and are often referred to as a Living Will.

You should understand that general instructions about refusing treatment, even if written down, may not be effective. Your instructions must clearly cover the treatment decisions that must be made. For example, if you just write down that you do not want "heroic measures," the instructions may not be specific enough. You should say the kind of treatment that you do not want, such as a respirator or chemotherapy, and describe the medical condition when you would refuse the treatment, such as when you are terminally ill or permanently unconscious with no hope of recovering. You can also give instructions orally by discussing your treatment wishes with your doctor, family members or others close to you.

Putting things in writing is safer than simply speaking to people, but neither method is as effective as appointing someone to decide for you. It is often hard for people to know in advance what will happen to them or what their medical needs will be in the future. If you choose someone to make decisions for you, that person can talk to your doctor and make decisions that they believe you would have wanted or that are best for you, when needed. If you appoint someone and also leave instructions about treatment in a Living Will, in the space provided on the Health Care Proxy form itself, or in some other manner, the person you select can use these instructions as guidance to make the right decision for you.

Deciding About Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation

Your right to decide about treatment also includes the right to decide about cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). CPR is emergency treatment to restart the heart and lungs when your breathing or circulation stops.

Sometimes doctors and patients decide in advance that CPR should not be provided, and the doctor gives the medical staff an order not to resuscitate (DNR) order. If your physical or mental condition prevents you from deciding about CPR, someone you appoint, your family members or others close to you can decide. A brochure on CPR and your rights under New York law is available from your health care provider (see Appendix D).
